

KENSINGTON PALACE

This year has been like no other and I would like to take this opportunity to thank all ambulance personnel across the U.K. for their extraordinary commitment throughout this incredibly challenging time.

For the nation, the Covid-19 pandemic has brought into sharp focus the sacrifices made by the emergency responder community. Yet we must not forget the courage and dedication with which paramedics and ambulance staff do their duty - protecting the interests of others and saving lives - each and every day.

Tragically, some have paid the ultimate price for that courage and others have had experiences that will hold lasting effects on their physical health or mental wellbeing. It is today that we remember them.

For those on the frontline, the next few months will undoubtedly be a challenge. But you are a testament to this country and I cannot thank you enough for all that you do.
